

Beyond the Operating Room

Surgery is one day. Caring for our patients is a journey.

At Naples Cosmetic Surgery Center, I believe that exceptional surgical care extends far beyond the operating room. I often describe our approach as "hand-holding": a philosophy of personal attention, proactive communication, and thoughtful follow-through throughout the surgical experience.

Our responsibility does not end when surgery is completed. It continues through immediate postoperative phone calls, attentive monitoring of recovery, timely office visits, and additional follow-up whenever needed. We maintain close communication with our patients and, with their permission, their families, ensuring that questions are answered, concerns are addressed, and postoperative problems can be recognized and evaluated promptly.

My philosophy is simple: excellent cosmetic surgery is measured by both the final aesthetic result and the quality of care, reassurance, and clinical judgment provided throughout recovery. Our patients should never feel that they are navigating the surgical journey alone.

Dr. Andrew Turk
Naples Cosmetic Surgery Center

"The operation may be over, but our responsibility to the patient never ends at the operating room door."